

Arubans, Americans and Dutch can now connect at “Singles Aruba”

This February 14th, how many will find themselves without a valentine with which to cuddle and snuggle over a romantic dinner? It may be too late for this year, but if you are unattached and don't want to stay that way, or just want to meet people of like interests and make friends, then Singles Aruba will interest you. Founders Angelina and Marcel have created the place for people to connect, and not only on the internet, but also with real live singles' events that will assist you in finding that special someone, or developing a circle of friends and improving your social life.

Marcel and Angelina are happily connected themselves, and not to each other, but they have listened to the laments of their many single friends in finding someone in Aruba, which is home to 10,000 single people! Surely, they thought, amongst such numbers there must be two people that have the special mojo, but why only limit it to singles in Aruba? Many island visitors would like to meet and get to know someone from Aruba before they arrive, or to stay in touch afterwards, or perhaps expatriated Arubans living in Holland or the States would like to reconnect with their childhood friends.

The website they have created, “Singles Aruba,” offering friendship and more is launching the “meeting place” on the net for Aruba's unattached of all ages, in a moderated environment that will not permit inappropriate material. Valentine's Day would appear to be the perfect moment to launch such a site, and so it is now officially available to sign up at <http://www.thesingles-company.com/dating/> The site is in English, but it will also be in Dutch and Papiamentu eventually.

There will be a moderate monthly fee for membership, with discounts for taking quarterly, semi-annual and annual memberships, but until the end of March, registration is absolutely free! The first 100 people to sign up will be eligible to win a “blind date” on a romantic sunset sail on the Jolly Pirates schooner. One male and one female will be chosen from the first 100 to receive a two-hour cruise with all drinks included, enjoyable enough as is and perhaps more so if they find the Aruban sunset will work its special magic! “Singles Aruba” authors Angelina and Marcel also plan to offer similar special promotions throughout the year and organize a number of exciting live events where singles can meet and mingle. When choosing to continue with membership, individuals can pay online with Paypal, or in person at the Cyberzone Café in the Seaport Marketplace. It may be a little too late for this Valentine's Day, but there is always next year, and perhaps you will find your special valentine at Singles Aruba!
